Clients searching for "Washington Attorney", "Washington Attorney Search", "Attorney DC", or "Washington Legal Services" may be overwhelmed by the number of attorneys in D.C. Brian Hughes, of the Washington Examiner, penned an article about the sheer number of attorneys living in D.C. titled, D.C.: The lawyer capital of the world, which highlights that 1 in 12 residents of D.C. are attorneys, and that 1 in 25 of all US attorneys live in D.C. (2011). Huffington Post further highlights the next city on the list, New York City, has a magnitude of order less attorneys per capita, at 1 attorney per 124 citizens (2011).

The District of Columbia was founded by charter, between 1790 and 1801 and was carved out of Maryland and Virginia between “river Potomac, at some place between the mouths of the Eastern Branch and Connocheague” (1790, quoted in Stewart, 1895, p. 203). In 1846, areas of D.C. below the Potomac retroceded back to Virginia, leaving D.C. to be comprised of only the Maryland lands (Get to Know DC, 2004, para. 5). D.C. is surrounded by Montgomery and Prince George’s counties in MD, and Fairfax County, Loudoun County and Prince William County in Virginia. Fairfax County, Virginia is the largest county in the Washington D.C. area, which is often referred to as the “DMV,” representing D.C., Maryland, and Northern Virginia.
